

Friday, March 16

5-6 pm	Keynote Address: Lowland Maya Archaeology in a Gilded Age: The University of Pennsylvania Museum's Tikal Project Hattula Moholy-Nagy, Consulting Scholar, University of Pennsylvania Museum of Archaeology and	11:35-12:00	Comparative Analysis of Copper Artifacts from Mensabak, Chiapas, Mexico Jackson Krause and Joel Palka, Department of Anthropology, University of Illinois at Chicago
	Anthropology	12:00-1:30	Lunch Break
	Reception to follow	1:30-1:55	Stones of Sight: Ethnographic and Ethnohistorical Analogies for Interpreting Classic Maya Effigy Flints and Obsidians
	Saturday, March 17		Zachary Hruby, Northern Kentucky University
8:30-8:50	Coffee	1:55-2:20	The Invention of an Ancient Object for the Art Market: a Case Study of Greater Nicoya Style Metates Alappa S. Dadlo Dzur Graduato Stylent The Object
8:50-9:00	Opening Remarks		Alanna S. Radlo-Dzur, Graduate Student, The Ohio State University
9:00-9:25	Formative Pottery at the Tayata site, Mixteca Alta: A Regional and Macro-regional Perspective Maria Teresa Palomares Rodriguez, Doctoral Student, Southern Illinois University	2:20-2:45	Postclassic Quetzalcoatl in the American Southeast Alice B. Kehoe, Professor Emeritus, Marquette University
9:25-9:50	The Tale of the Maya Urns from Lake Petha, Chiapas:	2:45-3:15	Break
	Context, Iconography, Sourcing, Surprises Joel Palka, Professor, University of Illinois at Chicago	3:15-3:40	Storm God Chasing in the Valley of Oaxaca Andrew Kracinski, University of Illinois at Chicago
9:50-10:15	I Threw it All Away: Consumer Goods at the 19 th -century Maya Refugee Site at Tikal, Guatemala James Meierhoff, Doctoral Student, University of Illinois at Chicago	3:40-4:05	'It's Our Tradition to Maintain the Forest': Indigenous Water Management in San Miguel Totonicapán Matthew Krystal, Associate Professor, North Central College
10:15-10:45	Coffee Break	4:05-4:30	Calling the Rain, Cutting the Storm: Cultural Models
10:45-11:10	Dressing: Essence and Transformation in Maya Iconography Karon Winzenz, Professor Emerita, University of Wisconsin-Green Bay		Research as a Pathway to Understanding the Relationship between Nature and Humans in a Semi- Rural Central Mexican Community Charles Stapleton, Northern Illinois University and College of DuPage; Maria Stapleton, Northern Illinois University
11:10-11:35	Vitality Materialized: On the Piercing and Adornment of the Body in Mesoamerica Andrew Finegold, Assistant Professor, University of	4:30	Wrap-up
	Illinois at Chicago	5-8 pm	Reception at the Field Museum

This conference is supported by generous sponsorship from the University of Chicago Department of Art History, the Center for Latin American Studies, the Neubauer Collegium, and the Oriental Institute

Kaqchikel-Grown coffee donated by Conscious Bean Coffee, courtesy of Matthew Krystal

